IBSEN'S 'ROSMERSHOLM' REWARDING EXPERIENCE

It is a long time since Ibsen has been played on a Christchurch stage. It says little for theatre groups here that it should be left to a visiting company—Dunedin's noted Globe Theatre of Patric and Rosalie Carey—to rectify this neglect.

This company last night presented a compelling "Rosmersholm" in the Museum Theatre, an experience the small audience should retain for a long time.

It is the Globe's first visit here, and a triumph of fine theatre.

Here were characterisations clearly defined and unwaveringly developed. Awareness of acting diminished rapidly as these characters grew in life.

Devoted
The effect was such that, though the cast cannot be described strictly as professional (except for Patric

Carey) one would happily bundle it into a vehicle and take it on tour anywhere and everywhere.

Here was that rewarding experience of people devoted to theatre expressing its art to a wonderful degree.

There were none of the elements of those actors who merely enjoy theatre. The overall impression was that of vocation instead—in brief, theatre.

Controlled
There was no jarring note. The play's tragic mood was clearly established and allowed to develop unencumbered.

The production was given with such controlled intensity that Ibsen's economy in dialogue showed up particularly well and even the briefest of remarks gained the weight the dramatist intended.

Ibsen is settling firmly in place as one of the world's great dramatists. "Rosmersholm" is among his later plays, depicting Rosmer as a man unhappily hung between two worlds.

Old family tradition, and the heavy atmosphere of the family home, are one part of him. The other is

BORSTAL BOYS OFF TO CAMP

WELLINGTON, To-day. Selected Borstal boys from the Invercargill Borstal would attend a summer camp under canvas in February, the Minister of Justice (the Hon J. R. Hanan) announced yesterday.

A similar camp was held last year, and it is now intended to make the camps a regular feature of the training programme. A site has been selected near the end of the Hollyford Valley Road.

Camp Works
Mr Hanan said that during the camps they would carry out such projects as cutting tracks, clearing picnic sites, and building concrete fireplaces, picnic tables, and stools.

This work in the Fiordland National Park area was a worthwhile community project and Mr Hanan said he was convinced that it would be helpful to the trainees to know that they had built something of continuing benefit to all who visited the area in the future.

"Although we have heard the Minister of Labour (the Hon T. P. Shand) publicly assuring waterside workers that they will receive no less an amount for an eight-hour

WATERSIDERS GIVE VIEWS ON CRITICISM

THE Associated Chambers of Commerce should leave problems associated with the shift-work system of handling cargo to the people most competent to discuss it—waterside workers and port employers.

Certainly, however, the industry required more efficient equipment to carry out its job, and the agency most remiss in this respect was the Railways Department.

Mr R. Fergus, secretary of the Lyttelton Waterside Workers' Union, emphasised these points in a statement today.

"Once again the flood of opinions on matters concerning shift work on the New Zealand waterfront," he said.

"Although we have heard the Minister of Labour (the Hon T. P. Shand) publicly assuring waterside workers that they will receive no less an amount for an eight-hour

Over £1 million a week on Education

The National Government is spending £57 million on education this year—£18 million more than Labour spent in 1960. The size of classes is being reduced. More teachers are joining the profession.

MORE TEACHERS, SMALLER CLASSES—
In 1963, there were 2,000 entrants to Teachers' Training Colleges. An all-time record. Steady progress is being made in reducing the size of classes.

HIGHER STANDARDS—
The Government is moving as quickly as possible to raise entrance standards for teachers and to give them better training. It has already announced plans to extend the training period to three years and it has a vigorous building programme for training colleges and hostels.

MORE SCHOOLS—
About £11 million is being spent this year on new schools and other educational buildings.

IMPROVED COURSES—
The Government intends to extend and improve facilities for teaching mathematics, science and languages, so that these subjects may be commenced in Form 1. Agricultural and technical education is being stepped up.

UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS—
The National Government is spending £29 million over the next five years on its universities' building programme.

A BETTER START IN LIFE FOR YOUR CHILDREN— Never before has so much been done to further the education of your children and to give teachers the rewards and status their profession deserves.

Real

The decaying Brendel was given the presence by David Laurence to become a real character.

Fine restrained playing by Bill McDonald enabled the radical editor, Mortensgaard, to bring the menace of the dirty politics into the house.

Marion Coxhead did fine work as the housekeeper. "Rosmersholm" will be presented again to-night.

Special Votes Will be Known On Tuesday

To-day. The chief electoral officer (Mr L. Irwin) said yesterday that the total number of special votes recorded in this year's general election would not be known until the Tuesday after polling day.

He said it was difficult to estimate the number of special votes likely to be recorded and one could only go on the number recorded in earlier elections.

In 1960, 101,188 special votes were recorded—95,232 within New Zealand and 6566 overseas—an average of about 1200 votes an electorate.

Mr Irwin said the total number of overseas special votes would probably be known on election night. The final figures from electorates would not be known until at least ten days after polling day.

ROSE TREES TO COST NO MORE, SOCIETY SAYS

MEMORIAL roses in the gardens of the crematorium at Bromley are to remain as they are, at no further cost to anybody.

This assurance has been given in letters sent out by the Cremation Society of Canterbury, in reply to questions prompted by a report published in the "Christchurch Star" on November 9.

"We would refer you to our recent letter regarding rose tree memorials," states the letter.

"Since sending out these notices it has been found that while many are fully aware of the original terms relating to a further charge after five years, there are those who may not have been informed of this position.

"The present management assumed from the wording on the receipt that all persons making arrangements for memorial rose trees in those days were fully aware of the fact.

Decision

"The society has now decided that because of possible misunderstandings, all rose tree memorials will continue as they now stand and will remain in perpetuity at no cost to anyone.

"We would also particularly like to mention that the society has never had any thoughts of removing the rose tree plot for any reason whatsoever, and we regret any distress that may have been caused by incorrect information.

"We trust that this letter will make the position very clear," the letter concludes.

"Please do not hesitate to communicate with us if you have any further queries."

Killed When Two Cars Collided

P.A. TE AROHA, To-day. A married woman was killed instantly and two people were admitted to the Waikato Hospital after two cars collided at an intersection at Te Aroha West, four miles south of Te Aroha, shortly before 7 o'clock last night.

The dead woman was: Mrs Catherine Iris Armstrong, aged 73, of Stanley Avenue, Te Aroha.

Men Injured
The injured were Mr John Armstrong, aged 77, her husband, a compound fractured wrist and severe shock, driver of one of the cars, and Mr Stuart Peter Carey, aged 19, Paeroa Road, Te Aroha, shock and bruises, driver of the other vehicle.

FREEZING OF WOOL CASH APPROVED

WELLINGTON, To-day. A suggestion to freeze the present increased returns for wool has been approved by the Dominion meat and wool section council of Federated Farmers.

Freezing would enable farmers to spend the money over a period on maintenance and improvement instead of having it counted as income for one year with resulting taxes.

The proposal was in line with the principle advocated by Federated Farmers that fluctuations in income should be ironed out, the council stated.

The present increased return could provide the opportunity to do something permanent for deferred maintenance and the averaging out of incomes and not merely for the farmer, said a vice-president, (Mr P. S. Plummer).

The meeting agreed that any freezing should be voluntary; that the money should be completely segregated, and if possible at least a part of it invested overseas; that it should not bear interest, nor be used in any way that would further increase inflation.
